FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Erika X. Driscoll Announces Here We Go: Fear, Identity, and Learning to Be Seen

A literary memoir explores fear, authenticity, identity, visibility, leadership, and the continuing work of growth.

October 21, 2026 - Keynote speaker, author, award-winning poet, Navy veteran, and business owner Erika X. Driscoll announces Here We Go: Fear, Identity, and Learning to Be Seen, a literary memoir grounded in lived experience and the practical lessons hidden inside it. The Kindle edition is available for preorder and releases October 23, 2026; paperback and hardcover editions release October 24, 2026.

Moving through military service, professional leadership, self-discovery, community, and the microphone, Driscoll examines how fear enters our decisions and how we can question the authority we give it. The book considers authenticity, identity, self-acceptance, integrity, kindness, visibility, and the possibility of recognizing the worth we already carry.

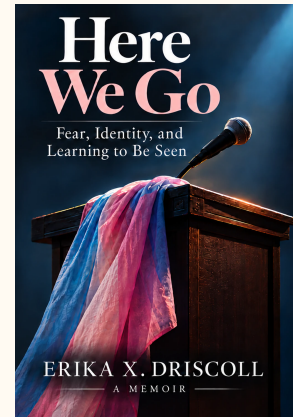

"Fear can be persuasive without being accurate. Being enough does not mean being finished growing."

- Erika X. Driscoll

Kindle, paperback, and hardcover retail editions are presented through the book's official website. Planned author-direct physical editions add a personalized registered EPUB for the buyer and a separate Pass It Forward EPUB that the buyer may give to someone they choose. Signed author-direct editions also include Driscoll's handwritten signature and an authenticity hologram.

The ideas in Here We Go also extend into Driscoll's speaking work through keynote presentations, chapter-reading breakout sessions, panels, and audience conversations designed to make room for reflection rather than a hard sell.
